

CITY HR CONFERENCE LOOKS TO THE FUTURE

The City HR Conference has taken a new futuristic dimension using the latest technology, space and content to set the scene for the people agenda over the next 5 years.

Taking place at the London Stock Exchange, an organisation which represents integrity, innovation and international operations, the conference will explore the opportunities and disruptors affecting firms and how HR can lead businesses in the context of successful transformation.

We are delighted to welcome to the platform seasoned City commentators and leading HR experts in the fields of:-

- A New City? Navigating the Opportunities and Challenges Ahead which will be skilfully - and perhaps occasionally controversially-led by Anthony Hilton of the City Pages of the London Evening Standard and also a well-known TV commentator and author on City affairs.
- Alignment of the People Agenda to the Business Strategy which will be the response of HR Leaders to these potential triumphs and disruptors and will assess the impact on banking, asset management, insurance and the markets in general. Exploring 'How can the COO and HR Director respond to current business challenges and support the board in crucial people decision-making?' will be Joanna Place, COO, Bank of England; Tim Jones, Group HRD of the London Stock Exchange and Annette Andrews, HR Director of Lloyd's of London each looking at different market perspectives and how each is rising to the challenges posed by disruptors as well as embedding regulation, remuneration and diversity and inclusion.

- Media Training for HR including 'on-air' responses delivered by Martin Popplewell, a News Presenter and Reporter, and using the in-house TV Studio operated by the London Stock Exchange. This will be a unique opportunity to view or experience a live media interview and to see the workings of a TV studio.

- The Role of HR in Combatting Cyber-Crime with a live experiential session delivered by Ed Cowen, a leading authority on cyber-crime and GDPR.

- Britain's Got Talent. A behind-the-scenes look at some City colleagues who have extraordinary talents which reinforce their business expertise and may help to bring out the best in situations - including this conference.

The conference has been shaped by the venue itself which epitomises innovation in terms of technology, its surroundings and the unique television studio which will feature in a key session.

Consolidating this experience will be a new format called EXPERT BYTES on topics such as AI and digitisation, trust and culture, remuneration and regulation together with diversity and inclusion where members will receive a 10 minute detailed insight, supported by handouts and toolkits, which can be applied to re-inforce and support HR practices and decision-making in their own firms.

Anthony Hilton
City Editor
London Evening Standard

Joanna Place
Chief Operating Officer
Bank of England

Tim Jones
Group HRD
London Stock Exchange

Annette Andrews
Human Resource Director
Lloyd's of London

Martin Popplewell
Newsreader, Reporter and
Media Trainer

Please visit www.cityhr.co.uk/events or see the download button on the home page to find out more about the conference which takes place on 20th November 2017.