

City of London Police offer Free Cyber Security Training, Ideal for New Starters

Just how good is your firm's cyber security? Cyber crime continues to rise in scale and complexity, affecting essential services, businesses and private individuals alike. It costs the UK billions of pounds, causes untold damage, and threatens national security. So it makes sense for you and your staff to learn how to be safe online and fix vulnerabilities.

Cyber Griffin is free City of London Police cyber security training. Security vetted, expert Police support Square Mile businesses to be safe online and build a safer community. This is tailorable, face to face, free training for all members of staff.

One of the Cyber Griffin services is a Baseline Briefing. It is:

- Practical advice to protect against criminals online, at home and at work
- For everyone, from those completely new to cyber security, through to professionals
- Ideal for new starters to a company

Staff can join one of the existing monthly Baseline Briefings or if you have a group and a venue, Police can provide you a separate briefing

As the National Policing Lead for Economic Crime, the City Police work on the front line in the fight against cyber crime and have up to the minute knowledge on the threats.

City of London Police Commissioner Ian Dyson said: "About 80% of the cybercrime reported in the City is from businesses, so it's important that we work with them to make sure that they don't become victims in the future. Cyber Griffin is about making sure that people at all levels have access to the best advice to protect them and their businesses."
